June 23, 2026 | Thomas P. Quinn, Jr.

The latest Weekly Sweep highlights significant developments from across the Northeast involving debt collection enforcement, auto finance compliance, consumer pricing transparency, and algorithmic decision-making. Recent actions by attorneys general and financial regulators demonstrate continued scrutiny of consumer-facing business practices and underscore the growing role of state regulators in shaping compliance expectations.

Key Developments

Massachusetts - Multistate Settlement Resolves Algorithmic Rent Pricing Allegations

Summary:

The Massachusetts Attorney General announced a multistate settlement with a national property management company concerning allegations that the company utilized algorithmic rent-setting tools in a manner that reduced competition and increased rental housing costs. The settlement includes monetary relief and reflects continued regulatory interest in the use of data analytics and algorithms in consumer markets. The action serves as another example of state regulators examining the intersection of technology, pricing practices, and consumer protection.

Summary:

Massachusetts - Attorney General Issues Vehicle Advertising Pricing Guidance

Summary:

The Massachusetts Attorney General issued an advisory reminding motor vehicle dealers that advertised prices must include mandatory and non-optional fees. The guidance emphasizes that prominently disclosing such fees elsewhere in an advertisement is not sufficient to satisfy Massachusetts requirements. Notably, the advisory interprets the definition of "advertisement" broadly to include labels and pricing information displayed directly on vehicles offered for sale. The advisory also provides consumers with a mechanism for reporting potential violations.
